course on women and politics. $6.50 each. Bulk rates available.

Women's Rights, Feminism, and Politics in the United States by Mary Lyndon Shanley with an Introduction and Epilogue by Shelby Lewis. This unit introduces the reader to the relationship between philosophy of feminism and American politics. It contains a history of women's political activities and of feminist ideology in the United States, along with a series of documents which are central primary sources for reconstructing those histories.

Women, Political Action, and Political Participation by Virginia Sapiro. This work focuses on women's opportunities for activism, communication, and influence, as well as how they have united into effective organizations devoted to political action and electoral participation.

Women's Movements: Organizing Change by Joyce Gelb and Ethel Klein. This monograph gives an in-depth look at women's social movements which are organized to effect change that require the resources, organization, leadership, and a constituency ready to commit itself to bringing this change about.

Women in the Judicial Process by Beverly B. Cook, Leslie F. Goldstein, Karen O'Connor, and Susette M. Talarico. In this monograph we look at women's experiences in that system. It is the authors' hope that these gains will continue, particularly as students of American government appreciate not only how the judicial process works but how women have fared at its hands.

Women and Power in American Politics by Milda K. Hedblom. This unit discusses the changes that justify a separate study of women in politics and the special problems of women as power holders. It goes on to analyze how opportunities and power are regularly and differentially distributed among women and considers the evidence that for some political purposes women may become a distinctive economic and political interest group.
